Here are some of our favorite Dänay Photography™ Prints

“When I consider an image for the hospital environment, I am thinking about the viewer being able to place himself in the photo and be touched in some way by the content of the photo. It could be the feeling of being in the photo, or an appreciation for the beauty we are privileged to experience. It could be as simple as how the lighting creates magic to something ordinary. Whatever it is, it is real - both to me as the photographer and to the viewer. We all need moments where we touch our deeper selves in a way that makes us feel whole - especially in a healthcare environment.”

Each image illicit the senses to experience a feeling so real it is as if you were taking the photo yourself. It is much like seeing a lemon and feeling your mouth pucker at the thought of sinking your teeth into it. Nature scenes speak volumes of the beauty that exists and reminds us that there is more than the seeming dullness of a difficult moment.

The ocean represents an allure of something so big and mysterious. Some people are afraid of it but can still acknowledge the beauty of it. It is a fact that more people plan vacations to tropical regions and islands because of the feelings that are conjured by the thought of an ocean breeze or water splashing their ankles. Water is a healer. Whether you are sitting beside it or playing in it, much pleasure is associated with it. Bring some warm beachy scenes into areas that are cold and hard to add to the comfort value of an area.

There is so much we do not get to see with the naked eye. When the shutter goes off on a close up, the excitement of seeing the details of an object kicks in. Something generally overlooked, such as a maple seed can be spectacular when you observe the veins leading to the lobe of the seed. It is a great distraction to marvel at something unusual or to discover something you've never seen close up. It's truly defying of words.

Take these five photos and describe in one word what comes to mind.

Does anything negative come to mind? Or has the camera captured the essence of scenes that positive and either relaxing or stimulating?

Using appropriate photos in the healthcare environment can add to any theme with realistic images that have the power to transport us away from anxiety to a distant place of hope, serenity and better able to trust in the process.

Another level of photography deals with form and textures. We love these images because of the design aspect of the shapes within them. This is great stuff for corporate areas where you want to make a strong statement. Abstracts are used a lot in these areas, but form offers structure and can be influential and compelling.
